One morning Holmes was disturbed by the arrival of a very excited young married man, who explained that his wife's conduct was mystifying. She had asked for £100 and declined to state the reason. Later the same day, passing a neighbouring cottage, he was horrified to see staring out at him from one of the upper windows, a Yellow Face with unreal features. That night he was uneasy and awakened to find his wife's bed empty. Looking out of the window he saw her leaving the cottage. The story of the Yellow Face attracted Holmes, and he investigated the occurrence only to find that Mrs. Munro who had had a child by her first husband, wished to hide the fact from her husband, and had the child brought near her for solace.
